Books

Crime by the Numbers

This book introduces the programming language R and is meant for undergrads or graduate students studying criminology. R is a programming language that is well-suited to the type of work frequently done in criminology - taking messy data and turning it into useful information. While R is a useful tool for many fields of study, this book focuses on the skills criminologists should know and uses crime data for the example data sets.

Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) Program Data: A Practitioner’s Guide

This book provides a guide to UCR data for people who want to use it for research or reporting. It covers basic details such as how many years of data are available and which variables are included, as well as goes into the reliability of the data and how to avoid common pitfalls when using the data. It tries to explain to readers both how to use the data, and how to use it well.

Other Experience

- 2018 - 2020    Data Scientist, Private Consultant
Wrote and tested code to efficiently convert millions of pages of PDFs into a machine-readable format. Designed, implemented, and maintained a website that allows users to visualize this data at various levels of aggregation.
- 2018            Data Scientist, Fels Institute of Government, University of Pennsylvania.
Produced and tested code to convert voting records into a machine-readable data and built a prototype website to display this data.
- 2017 - 2018    Research Scientist, National Archive of Criminal Justice Data (NACJD).
Wrote the Justice Data Learning Guide: No. 2, "Using the Law Enforcement Agency Identifiers Crosswalk \(LEAIC\)." This guide explains how to use the LEAIC dataset through an example incorporating both National Incident-Based Reporting System (NIBRS) data and US Census data. This guide includes code to use in both R and SPSS.
- 2016            Research Assistant, Dr. Emily Owens, University of Pennsylvania.
Collected, cleaned, and prepared US Census data for analysis and visualization.

Student Advising

- 2019-2020    Alec Bardey. Senior Honors Criminology Thesis (co-winner, J. Francis Finnegan Award). The Effect of Localized LED Streetlight Replacements on Adjacent Crime: Evidence from Philadelphia
